Victorian Government announces $83.1 million State Library Victoria redevelopment

- State Library Victoria to refurbish historic Queen's Hall and transform Australia's oldest public library
- The Victorian Government has committed $55.4 million over five years to the project
- The State Library to raise $28 million in philanthropic contributions

In today's pre-budget announcement and delivering an election promise, Minister for Creative Industries Martin Foley announced the Victorian Government will contribute $55.4 million to State Library Victoria's $83.1 million redevelopment project.

Scheduled to be completed over a five year period, the State Library Victoria redevelopment project will refurbish and renew the historic Queen's Hall (including a new rooftop garden terrace) and create new centres for digital media, entrepreneurship and an e-Town Hall initiative to connect regional public libraries throughout Victoria.

The redevelopment will also reopen the public entrance to State Library Victoria on Russell Street and create new exhibition spaces, new education and learning facilities for families, children and young people.

The Library Board of Victoria is proposing to secure the additional $28 million required for the redevelopment project, which will be announced once the funds are secured.

President of the Library Board of Victoria Mr John Wylie said, "We are very grateful for the Victorian Government's significant contribution to the redevelopment."

"We want to ensure the State Library evolves to continue to meet the ever-changing needs of the community now and in the future. This is not just a project for Melbourne – it's a major transformation that will benefit all of Victoria," Mr Wylie said.

Since 1856, State Library Victoria has been a place for learning, a place for connection and a place for inspiration for many generations.

Today, State Library Victoria is Australia's busiest public library, with almost 1.8 million visitors each year and a further 3.3 million people connect online.

This redevelopment project will create inspiring learning opportunities for families and visitors, and support the library to connect with more people across the state and the globe. It will build a better library for today and create a legacy of facilities and programs that can cope with the requirements of tomorrow and beyond.

Acting CEO and State Librarian, Ms Justine Hyde, noted that access to information is a key part of the library's mission and strategy, "This redevelopment is all about the library's next phase – it will reach more Victorians to enable them to benefit from the resources, expertise, facilities and digital experiences that the library can provide."

"The transformation will greatly expand the library's offering making it useful and inspirational in new ways and to more people," Ms Hyde said.
